Meet Malachi!

Malachi is a toddler with brown hair and blue eyes. He smiles when he recognizes people close to him. He communicates non-verbally by making eye contact, moving in excitement and through his big smile. He enjoys watching cartoons. He is showing interest in games and toys that light up and play music. He needs a lot of attention to soothe him when he is upset as he is unable to soothe himself.

Developmentally, Malachi has global delays due to a genetic condition. He is monitored by many medical specialists. He currently requires ongoing daily care which will continue throughout his life. Malachi receives supportive services several times a week such as occupational therapy, speech therapy, physical therapy and in-home nursing daily.

The best family for Malachi is a two parent home that is nurturing, structured, and has a strong support system. Due to the time and attention required to meet his significant special and medical needs and advocate for him in all areas it would be best for any siblings to be older. Malachi's family must be open to multiple appointments with medical specialists and community service providers and follow through with recommendations to meet his needs.

If you are the family that can love and support Malachi as he grows and develops, then I look forward to hearing from you.
